Public health insurance won't keep costs in check

An aggressive agenda to scrap and remake America's health care system is being planned in Washington right now. President Obama and members of Congress are holding discussions about establishing a public health care system, which would compete directly with the private insurance market in all 50 states.

As a health insurance broker, I work with small business owners every day and I'm aware that increases in health insurance premiums hit New Jersey businesses especially hard in this economy. But the best way to keep health insurance costs down is to keep the cost of health care down. A public health insurance plan is not the answer.

A public plan would reimburse medical care providers at lower rates. Currently, Medicare merely reimburses providers based on what the government is willing to pay for any given procedure. Doctors would make up the shortfall by passing the cost on to those who are privately insured.

This is irresponsible and dangerous, as it would ultimately eliminate the option of private insurance, greatly limiting the way in which medical care is delivered in the U.S.

What I have learned as a health insurance broker is that unequal competition does not work in this industry. Innovation and quality drive success. Over time, having a public plan square off against private insurance will make quality health care less accessible and further America's health care crisis.

Please join the New Jersey Association of Health Underwriters and others to craft sensible healthcare reform — a system in which Americans are offered more choice, not less.

Tony, you know this better than most. Once Obama gets his National Health Care in place, there will not be Private Insurance. Lets face it, no Company is going to provide private health care because of the cost of the premiums. You will be forced
